If you do, you can confidently feel that you are dressed in a material, equal to the very best quality, for Design and Finish, made in this country.

Since the change-over in management in June, 1941, "St. Patrick's Woollen Mills," Cork, are now working three shifts daily.

To-day there is a plentiful supply of Native Wool, but a shortage of necessary machinery (which we have on order for post-war delivery). This prevents sufficient deliveries of finished cloth to the Trade and General Public.

We would ask the indulgence of our Patrons if we cannot reasonably cope with their orders.

All are being taken in strict rotation.

During St. Patrick's Week a Special Window Display of Our Products is being very kindly given by the following firms:—
Messrs. Macey's, South George's St., Dublin;
Munster Arcade, St. Patrick St., Cork.
Messrs. Wm. Todd & Co., Ltd., Limerick.
We trust the public will inspect and appreciate these exhibits.

"St. Patrick's Woollen Mills," Cork, is one of the largest of its kind in this country. Modern in every respect, it is equipped with the newest and most scientific machinery.

Expert craftsmen handle every process of manufacture from the raw material—the wool of the Irish sheep—to the finished cloth ready for tailoring.

TO-DAY'S HOLIDAY PLANS

THE festivities and entertainments for St. Patrick's Day are as numerous and as varied as in other years, except that there will not be any large Army parade. Various units of the auxiliary defence forces will assemble in the Dublin district, including the Maritime Inscription Corps at Dun Laoghaire and the L.S.F. at College Park. In the churches there will be special Services and sermons, including a Communion Service in Irish at St. Patrick's Cathedral, and a sermon by Rev. Canon Leslie at Evensong.

One of the sporting events long associated with St. Patrick's Day is the Irish Kennel Club's Show at Ballsbridge, and despite difficulties of travelling it is expected that as big a number of dogs as ever will parade to-day.

For football followers there are Dublin University playing the Curragh Command at Rugby, at Lansdowne road, in the Senior Cup; the League of Ireland playing Northern Ireland League at soccer, at Dalymount; Munster playing Leinster, at hurling, and Ulster playing Leinster, at Gaelic football, at Croke Park, while for hockey followers there is the Mills Cup final—Portrane v. Pembroke Wanderers—at Londonbridge road. There is racing at Baldoyle and Limerick, competitions at most golf clubs, and the Army junior boxing championships at the National Stadium.

CASTLE CEILIDHE

The theatres expect full houses, and several dances, including that at the Gresham, are already booked out. Public attention, however, will centre on Dublin Castle, where, for the first time, the Gaelic Society of U.C.D. is having a ceilidhe. Mr. Rory de Valera will be M.C.

Dancing will be in St. Patrick's Hall, scene of many important State functions, and the Picture Gallery and the Bermingham Tower will also be in use. Invitations to attend have been accepted by An Taoiseach, Mr. Derrig, Mr. Aiken, and Mr. Boland. The ordinary college dance will be held at 86 St. Stephen's Green. Dublin revellers should note that the last trams leave somewhat earlier than usual.

Deprived of their overseas markets by postal restrictions, Irish shamrock sellers hope that the home market to-day will rise to the occasion and compensate them for their lost export trade. The price remains the same—a penny for a good-sized bunch, despite the rise in the cost of living and without any compulsion by the price controller.

Berlin Claims Raid on Grimsby

Of twenty raiding aircraft reported to have taken part in Monday night's visit to the north-east coast of England, not more than half that number came over land, and of these four were destroyed. There were no casualties and only slight damage, says the Press Association.

Berlin Radio, quoted by Reuter, stated that heavy bombers attacked Grimsby, that many fires were caused, and that two of the raiding 'planes did not return.

Monetary Reform Advocates

PROPOSALS for the changing of our credit and monetary systems are likely to be pressed forward as important factors in our industrial development, as a result of the changes in the N.A.I.D.A. Council at Monday's meeting.

On the new Council, an Irish Times reporter learned yesterday, there is strongly represented a group which believes in the urgency of credit and monetary changes. Their intentions are indicated in a resolution passed by the annual meeting to appoint a special sub-committee to investigate social and economic systems and to inform public opinion by means of lectures and other propaganda. The terms of reference are much wider than those of the recent Banking Commission.

This sub-committee has yet to be appointed, and, though it is expected that a long time will elapse before it is able to announce its opinions, it will be urged in the intervening period to try to develop public interest in social and economic systems. Prior to the decision to appoint this sub-committee there had been in existence another "Financial Reform Committee." This committee came into existence last year, about the time that the N.A.I.D.A. sponsored a lecture by Professor Alfred O Rahilly on "Money," and attended both by members of the association and by outsiders. This committee consisted of seven people, but they failed to agree on general recommendations about financial reform.

Opposition to the divergence of a large section of the members of the N.A.I.D.A. into credit reform advocacy was expressed at Monday's meeting by Mr. N. P. McEvoy, who declared that the association had gone far enough in this matter, and should not make itself a platform for fadists. In spite of this statement the resolution to set up a special committee to inquire into economic systems was carried.

The fourteen members elected at Monday's meeting do not entirely control the N.A.I.D.A. Council, for this body also contains sixteen members chosen by the Federation of Manufacturers.

ALLIES PLAN TO ATTACK ATLANTIC U-BOAT PACKS
Reported Link With Second Front

NAVAL and Air Chiefs of Britain, the United States and Canada have reached complete agreement at a conference in Washington on measures to combat the U-boat menace.

This was announced last night by the United States Navy Department, which states that further talks are taking place. According to Reuter's Washington Correspondent, military observers there connect the conferences with the opening of a second front.

Disclosing the conference, the Washington Navy Department says: "This was one of a series of Allied conferences which have been, and will continue to be held, in order that all phases of the anti-U-boat campaign can be kept constantly under review, that information and views can be exchanged, and that anti-U-boat measures can be adjusted to best advantage.

"Complete agreement was reached on the policy to be pursued in the protection of Allied shipping in the Atlantic, and in the best methods of employing the Allied escort vessels, anti-submarine craft and aircraft in defeating the U-boat menace."

The conference was under the chairmanship of Admiral Ernest King, Commander-in-Chief, United States Fleet, and was also attended by Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Moore (British Admiralty) and Air Vice-Marshal Durston, R.A.F., Coastal Command.

The position is to be kept constantly under review. Washington observers believe that every vessel not actually on combat duty will be thrown against the U-boats to ensure the safety of the North Atlantic sea lanes.

Reuter's Washington Correspondent says the conferences are believed by U.S. military observers to be directly connected with the opening of a second front. They point out that the huge forces needed for an invasion of the Continent can only be supplied if the United Nations are able to keep open a supply line across the Atlantic for the flow of an immense amount of war materials.

Observers in Washington expect an increase of the U-boat activity soon, and it is stated that the U.S. are now feverishly working on production of new-type destroyer escorts.

Britain alone has more than 500 front-line warships, mainly destroyers and corvettes, on the task of fighting the Atlantic U-boats.

The First Lord of the British Admiralty, Mr. Alexander, recently described the increasing concentration of the new U-boats as "lying not in single packs, but in echelons of packs."

MALTA TALKS

Naval chiefs have also been in conference at Malta, it was disclosed last night. Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, Supreme Naval Commander, Mediterranean, and Admiral Sir Henry Harwood, C.-in-C., Levant, visited Malta together and conferred with Vice-Admiral Sir Stuart Bonham-Carter, Flag-Officer in Charge, Malta, and Vice-Admiral Leatham.

Admiral Cunningham stated later that Allied attacks against U-boats in the Mediterranean are going well. A very large number had been destroyed in attacks against Allied convoys, he said.—(Reuter.)

Woman Shot Dead in Co. Waterford

While walking with her husband along the road near her mother-in-law's house at Poulbada, four miles from Cappoquin, on Monday night, Mrs. Maureen O'Shea, the 20-year-old wife of an agricultural labourer, was shot dead. Her husband was uninjured, and there is a six weeks old baby.

At the inquest held in Cappoquin last night by Dr. McCarthy, Coroner, Dungarvan,

Dr. McGrath, State Pathologist, stated that he had found a rugged wound over the left shoulder blade, which was caused by gunshot, which had been fired from back to front. Having given details of the injuries caused, he said that death was instantaneous.

Dr. William White, M.O., Cappoquin, who had assisted at the post-mortem, having corroborated, Superintendent P. J. Doyle, Lismore, applied for an adjournment of the inquest pending further investigations, and this was granted.

Two men have been detained in connection with the affair.

Master Bakers' Views on Effect of Trade Bonus

The hearing was resumed before the Wages Advisory Tribunal at the Department of Industry and Commerce, Kildare street, Dublin, yesterday, of the application for a maximum bonus of 8s. per week for workers in the bakery trade in Dublin, Dun Laoghaire and Bray. The application was made by the Irish Bakers', Confectioners' and Allied Workers' Union; the I. T. and G.W.U., the Workers' Union of Ireland, and the Irish Union of Distributive Workers and Clerks.

Mr. J. O'Brien, Secretary, Federated Union of Employers, said that the effect of the findings of a Government established Court of Inquiry in 1940 and 1941 was that no increased wages could or should be paid. The Court found that the loss being incurred by the industry at the time was 1s. 1½d. per sack of flour, and, if they subtracted this from 3s. 9d. (the sum per sack of flour by which the industry benefited from the Government bread subsidy of £2,000,000) they were left with a margin of 2s. 7½d. per sack. Actually, since 1941, the costs of the industry had increased by 2s. 10d. per sack—thus making a loss of 2½d. per sack. It was quite true that the 100 per cent. extraction and the type of wheat being milled resulted in a higher yield of bread per sack—estimated by the Master Bakers at three 4 lb. loaves per sack—which meant that they were getting 9 lbs. of flour worth 1s. 11½d. extra out of each sack.

WHO PAYS?

Putting the loss of 2½d. per sack against that they got a profit of 1s. 9d., to which had to be added the subsidy of ¼d. per loaf on the 3 extra loaves, making the present margin of profit 1s. 10½d. per sack. If 2s. 7½d. per sack was regarded in 1940 by the Legislature as a reasonable and necessary margin, it was hard to say now when the margin was only 1s. 10½d., how the industry could be asked to shoulder a burden which must reduce the margin per sack still further. Any increase granted must be at the expense of the taxpayer or the consumer, or both, or must be borne by the industry.

Mr. D. J. O'Donoghue, Chairman, Messrs. Bolands, Ltd., said it was untrue, as suggested, that the millers were getting 1s. per sack in subsidy. When rumours of war were rife and Mr. Lemass (Minister for Supplies) saw the dangers confronting this country, he went to the millers and instructed them to get in all the wheat they possibly could. The shilling per sack which the millers then collected from the consumers was handed over to the Irish Wheat Reserve (the body formed to handle the wheat), and they in turn paid it out in interest on moneys advanced by the banks to purchase wheat and on storage. The appreciation in the price of the wheat from the time it was purchased until it was used by the millers was such that it increased in value by hundreds of thousands of pounds. The masses of the consumers, therefore — namely, the workers—got the benefit of every penny of the money saved.

The Tribunal will report its findings to the Minister.

Deputation on Loans for Farmers

A deputation from the Irish Farmers' Federation, led by its chairman, Mr. John Rooney, was received yesterday by the Agricultural Credit Corporation. The deputation made the request that short-term loans should be made available to farmers to purchase seeds and facilitate the tillage campaign. They point out that when Mr. Aiken spoke in Navan recently he indicated that he thought that such loans could be made through the agency of the Agricultural Credit Corporation. Miss Bobbett, Secretary of the Federation, said subsequently that the Corporation was sympathetic, but suggested that if the Minister for Agriculture made representations to them they would be prepared to consider a scheme.

AXIS FALL BACK IN NORTH TUNISIA

GERMAN forces in the Northern coastal belt of Tunisia have fallen back in the Sedjenane area, Reuter's Special Correspondent in North Africa reported last night.

Troops of the First Army have moved up and taken a ridge about four miles south-east of Tamara without fighting. They are now pushing on towards Sedjenane itself, an important point of the railway running to the coast.

The Germans have withdrawn to the high ground protecting the Sedjenane road.

Land operations elsewhere are still confined to patrol activity, although in the Gafsa area, in the south, Allied artillery has moved up to attack Axis armoured vehicles. Between Gafsa and Metlaoui French troops are said to have broken up armoured patrols.

Two Allied aircraft are missing from all operations.

BOMBERS SHOT DOWN

Two Axis bombers were shot down on Monday by the British destroyer, H.M.S. Derwent, during an unsuccessful attack by twelve aircraft on an Allied convoy off Tripolitania, says a British communiqué. A third bomber was damaged and may have been destroyed. H.M.S. Derwent suffered neither casualties nor damage.

Another force of Axis aircraft also made an unsuccessful attempt to bomb a convoy off Tunisia. One aircraft was shot into the sea by the destroyer, H.M.S. Vanoc, and a second probably destroyed by H.M.S. Verity.

It was stated in the British House of Commons yesterday that it was estimated that 90,000 Germans and 45,000 Italians were engaged in the battle of El Alamein. German casualties totalled about 30,000, of which 7,200 were prisoners. Nearly all the Italians were casualties, about one-half being prisoners. British casualties amounted to 13,600.—(Reuter and Press Association.)

8th Army Gets Ready

Reuter's Special Correspondent on the Mareth front states: The Eighth Army is getting ready for the offensive. Supplies of armour, guns, and fighting vehicles of all kinds are rolling up to the front to increase the already massive strength of Montgomery's desert army.

The Allies are now having increased air support for all operations. Massed formations of R.A.F. light day bombers have been over the Mareth line bombing targets just in the rear.

Algiers Radio said last night that new aerodromes have been prepared in Tunisia to receive the "influx of 'planes" sent by the United Nations.

Airfields and shipping off the Tunisian coast are being attacked frime the air, despite bad weather. Despite constant losses, the Axis still runs ships through the Sicilian narrows. Two supply ships, with four escort vessels, were attacked by Flying Fortresses, which scored a direct hit one one of the vessels.

Objects to Coal for Dublin

Viscount Castlereagh (Conservative, Down) in the British House of Commons yesterday asked the Minister of Fuel and Power why certain colliery companies had been ordered to send coal to Dublin; and whether, in view of the shortage in Britain, this policy would be continued.

Major Lloyd George—The supply of coal for Eire has been considered by the Government from time to time, and certain limited quantities have been made available. There has been no formal direction by my Ministry to collieries to provide coal for Eire. Supplies are released through the normal trade channels, from those collieries where the coal can best be spared at the particular time.

Fourteen Days in Open Boat

SIXTEEN members of the crew of a Norwegian ship, sunk 700 miles west of Valentia, arrived in Dublin from Valentia last night.

Kevin O'Donovan McClory, who was born in Dun Laoghaire, was the only Irishman among the crew. They had been fourteen days in an open boat before being picked up and landed at Valentia. The men were soon being cared for by doctors, nurses, and the Valentia branch of the Red Cross Society.

CURTAIL YOUR CURRENT

As there has been practically no rain since February 12th, the inflow to the River Shannon is now very low, and the output of electricity from the Ardnacrusha Power Station has fallen considerably. An increased load, says the E.S.B., is being taken from the Pigeon House Station, causing increased consumption of coal.

Should the present drought continue it may be necessary for the Board to introduce further curtailments of supply earlier than has been anticipated. The public are requested to further reduce their present consumption of electricity.

This is McClory's first visit to Ireland since he left it at the age of two. A native of Dun Laoghaire, he lived for some time in America. His mother lives in Bromley, Kent, now, and she was the first person to whom he sent a message when he landed.

The Norwegian Consul, Mr. E. J. Betson, met the crews when they arrived in Dublin yesterday. Two of them remained in Valentia hospital. The remainder are being accommodated by the Rev. D. R. C. Hilliard, Chaplain, at the Mission to Seamen.

Strong Japanese Attacks Held in Burma

Fresh attempts by Japanese troops to push Field-Marshal Wavell's men back towards the sea on a three-mile front north of Rathedaung, in Western Burma, have been held, according to Reuter.

"Fighting continues, but up to yesterday evening no further change in positions had taken place," said yesterday's communiqué. "R.A.F. bombers and fighters are tireless in the aid they are giving the British and Indian infantry.

The A.P. correspondent at New Delhi says the Japanese attack on the Arakan front has created a serious situation for the British in that area, but the British themselves are in a position for a possible attack that could change the picture.

The Japanese attack was launched northward from Rathedaung in such violence, he says, that the battlefield, small as it is, was strewn with bodies.

It was reported early this morning that after Indian troops had six times beaten off strong Japanese attacks on a hill marking the deepest point of the Allies' inland advance on Akyab, the British Command decided a voluntary evacuation of the hill. Further attacks, aimed at throwing the Allies off the east bank of the Mayu river, were repulsed.

Field-Marshal Wavell yesterday expressed confidence in India's ability to meet and defeat any attack against her soil, says a Reuter message from New Delhi. "But," he added, "we cannot yet say that India is safe."—(Reuter and A.P.)

Seven Japanese Ships Torpedoed

The U.S. Navy Department announced yesterday that seven Japanese ships had been sunk or damaged by U.S. submarines. They included a destroyer and three non-combatant ships sunk.—(Reuter.)

Two large Axis supply ships were torpedoed in the North Sea early yesterday morning by British light coastal forces. The ships formed part of a convoy which was intercepted off Terschelling.

Mass Stuka Raids As Soviets Hit Back Heavy Tank Battle

THE German High Command is throwing in masses of dive-bombers against the Russians, who are hitting back at the German left wing above Kharkov. German radio last night spoke of 200 Stukas attacking Russian forces west of Byelgorod, 50 miles north of Kharkov, while formations almost as powerful assailed other groups falling back from Kharkov.

In the meantime a German military spokesman reports that the Russians are counter-attacking west of Byelgorod; have made a thrust across the ice on Lake Ilmen, and carried out attacks in the areas of Staraya Russa and Novgorod, north of Lake Ilmen.

The German Command, following the fall of Kharkov, has switched the main weight of its counter-offensive south to the middle course of the Donetz river, says Reuter's Correspondent in Moscow. Strong panzer and infantry forces are now fiercely attacking Russian positions between Izyum, on the Donetz, 75 miles south-east of Kharkov, and Voroshilovgrad, 80 miles further south-east, inside the Donetz bend. All attempts to force a crossing of the Donetz have so far been smashed with heavy losses to the Germans. In one battle alone they lost 32 tanks, 15 guns and 40 lorries loaded with infantry.

But the fall of Kharkov is a heavy blow for the Red Army, the possible effect of which on the whole Russian line in the south down to Rostov cannot be lightly dismissed. Already the Germans have begun to exert pressure in the direction of Rostov. Throughout Monday their heavy artillery kept up a non-stop bombardment of the Russian positions on this front.

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

Last night's Soviet communiqué states:—

"During March 16 our troops engaged the enemy in the same directions as before."

The supplement states:—

"Troops of the Western front overcoming three counter-attacks continued their offensive and occupied several inhabited localities. During the capture of Kholm-Zhirkovsky our troops took 42 tanks, 19 guns, 62 machine-guns, 18 mortars, 10,000 shells and 50,000 rounds of ammunition. The enemy lost 1,000 officers and men in dead alone.

"South of Byeli our troops continued their offensive and occupied 32 inhabited localities.

"In the area of the middle course of the Northern Donetz tanks attacked a strong column of enemy tanks and motorised infantry. As a result of the tank battle the enemy retreated, suffering extremely heavy losses. In another sector our units repelled counter-attacks and destroyed five tanks, six armoured cars and ten trucks laden with ammunition. A battalion of enemy infantry coming up to the front line was dispersed and partly annihilated by our artillery fire.

"On March 15 our Air Force destroyed or damaged 150 lorries of troops and ammunition, silenced 20 artillery and mortar batteries, wrecked a military train and dispersed and partly annihilated about one battalion of infantry."—Reuter.

SOVIET ATTACKS

Russian forces are counter-attacking the German spearheads west of Byelgorod (50 miles north of Kharkov), a German military spokesman, quoted by German Radio reported last night. "The Russians have brought up reserves to this sector mainly from the Orel area," the spokesman said. A Russian thrust across the ice of Lake Ilmen, carried out with motor sledges, was also reported from Berlin, together with a claim that Soviet attacks in the area of Staraya Russa were frustrated.

The Russians have also launched a new attack in the area of Novgorod, north of Lake Ilmen, according to this spokesman.

" TROOPS LACKING "

Captain Ludwig Sertorius, German radio commentator, said last night that "at the moment it does not appear that the Russians are making preparations on the Upper Donetz to fight again for the possession of Kharkov. Troops for such an undertaking are obviously lacking."

The Soviet efforts, he declared, "are now solely directed at preventing a further advance of German forces towards the east and at liberating the Soviet fighting group which, in the retreat, was cut off in the forest area south-east of Kharkov before it was able to reach the Donetz.

"Since the fall of Kharkov the brunt of the fighting has shifted to the Byelgorod area.

The commentator also claimed that the threat to the southern flank of the German system of positions around Orel which existed a week ago "can now be regarded as removed."—(Reuter.)

GERMAN ADVANCE

Paris radio claimed last night that German forces were 50 miles east of Kharkov, north and south of the city, and that a German spearhead was advancing towards Kupyansk.—Reuter.

Air-Sea Attacks in Pacific

Japanese 'planes on Monday attempted their first big-scale attack since last November against Australia's "front door" port of Darwin, states Reuter's special correspondent at Allied Headquarters in South-West Pacific. Two bombers and 12 Zeros were shot down by Allied fighters, four of which were lost.

Some 500 miles north-east of Darwin three Japanese troop transports making for Dobo Island were attacked by Allied bombers and fighters. Two of the ships were fired by direct bomb hits and machine-gun fire. Troops packing the decks of all three ships were mown down.—(Reuter.)

Minister Replies to Protest

Regarding the resolution of the Westmeath County Committee of Agriculture, condemning him for his "insulting remarks to Mr. Lestrange," the Minister for the Co-ordination of Defensive Measures (Mr. Aiken) said yesterday he was surprised, if some members of the Committee thought that what he had said, or how he had said it, was uncalled for, they did not raise the matter at the meeting a month ago, instead of passing a vote of thanks without dissent.

"Mr. Lestrange," said the Minister, "stood in the middle of the room all during the meeting, although everyone else around him was seated. He made three speeches, and made several attempts to interrupt during my replies to questions. When I had finished some other members rose to speak, but Mr. Lestrange tried to take possession again. At that point I said: 'Give some one else a chance; you have been yapping all day.' No one objected to the terms of my request, and it had the desired effect."

Dentistry as a Career

Mr. Arthur W. Mooney, L.D.S., R.C.S.I., of 26 Upper Fitzwilliam street, Dublin, writes in reference to the article "Dentist's View On Dentistry as a Career," which appeared in Monday's Irish Times, that there is no shortage of dentists—in fact, there are more now on the Register than at any time—but that he merely elaborated a statement made at the annual meeting of the Dental Hospital that there is "for some unexplained reason a dearth of dental students just now."

WESTERN MIGRANTS ON MOVE

"IRISH TIMES" SPECIAL REPORTER.

The first of the 1943 groups of migrants to leave their small mountain farms, on the Western seaboard, for the richer soil of recently divided estates in the Midlands, are at present preparing to take the road. The groups, however, will be smaller than in other years, because of the diminishing rate at which land is being acquired for division and because of the difficulty of obtaining materials to build houses on the new farms.

An Irish Times reporter, who recently visited a community near Belmullet, from which some of the small-holders are being migrated, found that these migratory schemes are regarded as long past the experimental stage. In a great many of the most congested districts many of the people have relatives, or former neighbours, who have gone to the Midlands and have come back, or written back, to tell of their comparative prosperity.

"Sure, the worst man that went from here has ten head of cattle now," was how it was put by one woman who is preparing to move this year. By "worst man" she meant the poorest of those that had migrated from this district in preceding years.

POETIC, BUT DISMAL

The house and holding, in that particular case, was one which would have enchanted a poet of the early W. B. Yeats period—a thatched cottage, situated on the shoulder of the hill, looking into a glen, on whose floor was a broad shining lake, and, all round, the mountains of Mayo, which take on such wonderful purple tints in the evening. What mattered, however, to this migrant, was that the house was falling down, and that in its one small, smoky room were living four adults and seven children; trying to live on the produce of five or six acres of a poor mountain farm, whose fields were almost as perpendicular as the walls of their house.

Their general attitude seemed to be one of strong aversion to the whole scene; with all that it meant of grinding hardship, and a keen desire to be off to the promised land across the Shannon with the greatest possible speed.

Before the migrants finally move they are given a trial visit to their proposed new homes and if everything is satisfactory, as it usually is, then the family with their live-stock, crops remaining from last season and their chattels are moved by the Land Commission. Lack of transport facilities will make the moving this year more difficult, but it is expected that it will be possible to give a "removal service" almost as good as in former years.

British Premier Questioned on Son's Letter

Mr. Winston Churchill, making his first appearance in the House of Commons since his illness, was questioned yesterday by Mr. Aneurin Bevan (Labour) about a letter written to a London paper by his son, Capt. Randolph Churchill.

The letter, it was stated deplored a tendency to assume that any Frenchman who had occupied an official position under the French Government must be a "traitor" or possessed of Fascist mentality.

The Prime Minister said Capt. Churchill's letter did not fall under the paragraph in the King's Regulations prohibiting published comment by soldiers, as it dealt with political, and not military affairs. He was informed that on other than military subjects a soldier could write to the Press without the permission of higher authorities.

Mr. Bevan said he would raise the matter again.

A large photograph of Mr. Churchill hanging at the entrance to an exhibition of Soviet life in Oxford street, London, was destroyed on Monday night by someone throwing tar over it.

Baldoyle Programme

As usual, the St. Patrick's Day meeting at Baldoyle marks the opening of the Irish flat racing season, but the programme includes several jumping events which will be of more interest.

The principal event—the Baldoyle Handicap Steeplechase—will bring out only six runners, and, in the absence of Prince Regent, the race must be regarded as good for Prince Blackthorn. Selections:—

Howth Plate—Tabrik.
St. Patrick's Steeplechase—Miss Paget's selected.
Kinsealy Plate—Pontifex.
Baldoyle Steeplechase — Prince Blackthorn.
Dublin Hurdle—Tiverton.
Hunters' Steeplechase—Spatol.
Spring Plate—Apocalypse.

Curragh Selections:—2.15, Tabrik; 2.40, Hush Tommy; 3.10, Goleonda; 3.35, Prince Blackthorn; 4.5, Tiverton; 4.30, Bay Falloch; 5.0, Apocalypse.

Tote Double on Fourth and Sixth Races.

TIPPERARY HOUNDS

March 10th—Camas Bridge. Hounds had a very fast 15 minutes out of Cluen. They ran in a left-handed circle to ground under the railway bridge near Ardmayle. From Saddler's gorse hounds ran back through the end of Knockroe down to the main road. Here the fox were headed, and hounds ran back to the covert, leaving Saddler's just on their right, they ran on to Rathcannan, through Racecourse Hall, and crossed the Cashel New Inn road. Hounds ran on right-handed nearly to Donaghreen, and lost their fox under Ballydoyle.

March 13th, Fethard—From Flynn's a vixen was turned in two small fir circles and hounds were stopped. From a bit of wild gorse an outlier ran down into Burke's Firs, and turned left-handed in a ring. He ran back through Burke's Firs, and was marked to ground in Kylevallagh, after 45 minutes. Hounds did not find again.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Rev. Canon G. A. Chamberlain, presiding yesterday at a meeting of the Foreign Mission Supply Association, held in the C.M.S. Hall, Molesworth street, Dublin, when a Gift Day in aid of Foreign Mission Hospitals was held, said that when the war was over there would be great openings for Christiasity in China. Mrs. T. Wigham paid tribute to the home administration of foreign missionary societies.

How Your Shares Moved

Small Business in London

With nothing to stir up enthusiasm on the London Stock Exchange yesterday, prices were moving within narrow limits, and business remained restricted. Gilts remained steady.

In Textiles, Bradford Dyers were still under the influence of the Pref. arrears payment, and the Ord. gained another 6d. Celanese were a little harder, while Courtaulds were steadier at 48s. 6d. Calico Printers lowered a point to 39 and 75 respectively. Great Southern Ord. gave way to 9½.

Home Government Funds inclined higher, and 4 p.c. Conversion Loan rose to 113½; Agreement Loan to 109½, and Security Loan to 106½. 4 p.c. Exchequer bonds dropped to 110⅝; 3½ p.c. War Loan shaded off to 105¾.

Todd Burns issues were strong on the results for the past year. The Pref. advanced 1/- to 91/- and the Deb. jumped 9/- to 100/-. Pim Bros. Pref. hardened to 35/3.

K. and J. Burke Def. hardened to 8/1½ and the Pref. to 8/-. Carroll Pref. rose to 26/- x.d., and Cement Deb. gained 7/6 at 109½. Dublin Artisans' Dwellings fell 10/- to 144, but Findlater Deb. spurted 4/3 to 100/-.

Irish Times 1st Pref. lost a further 1/6 at 75/6, but the 2nd Pref. improved to 18/-. Green Cinema Ord. moved up to 2½, and some other Irish Industrials were dealt in at steady levels.

British industrials showed little life and the trend was easier. Coats Ord. declined to 42/9, and Vickers Ord. to 19/7½, but Imperial Chemical Ord. held 39/1½.

The Dublin Stock Exchange will be closed to-day (St. Patrick's Day).

Dublin Markets Turn Easier

PUBLIC interest on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday was on a reduced scale, and scattered liquidation resulted in an easier tendency in prices. The undertone, however, remained steady.

Guinness Units were small sellers and lack of support resulted in a fall to 118s. Home Rails were dull. Great Northern Ord. firmed up to 17½, but the Pref. and Deb. were both lowered a point to 39 and 75 respectively. Great Southern Ord. gave way to 9⅛.

Home Government Funds inclined higher, and 4 p.c. Conversion Loan rose to 113½; Agreement Loan to 109½, and Security Loan to 106½. 4 p.c. Exchequer bonds dropped to 110⅝; 3½ p.c. War Loan shaded off to 105¾.

Todd Burns issues were strong on the results for the past year. The Pref. advanced 1/- to 91/- and the Deb. jumped 9/- to 100/-. Pim Bros. Pref. hardened to 35/3.

K. and J. Burke Def. hardened to 8/1½ and the Pref. to 8/-. Carroll Pref. rose to 26/- x.d., and Cement Deb. gained 7/6 at 109½. Dublin Artisans' Dwellings fell 10/- to 144, but Findlater Deb. spurted 4/3 to 100/-.

Irish Times 1st Pref. lost a further 1/6 at 75/6, but the 2nd Pref. improved to 18/-. Green Cinema Ord. moved up to 2½, and some other Irish Industrials were dealt in at steady levels.

British industrials showed little life and the trend was easier. Coats Ord. declined to 42/9, and Vickers Ord. to 19/7½, but Imperial Chemical Ord. held 39/1½.

The U-boat Campaign

One of the first fruits of Mr. Anthony Eden's visit to the United States has been the announcement, which we print to-day, of "complete agreement" between the naval authorities of Great Britain, the United States and Canada regarding the measures to be taken to combat the German U-boat campaign. Discussions have been in progress in Washington for some time past. The conferences have been under the chairmanship of Admiral King, of the United States Navy, and have been attended by numerous experts, including Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Moore, representing the British Navy, Rear-Admiral Brodeur, of Canada, and Air Vice-Marshal Durston, of the Royal Air Force's Coastal Command. Simultaneously a meeting was held in Malta, where representatives of the British Navy and Air Force also discussed their plans for the war against the U-boat. Naturally no details have been made public regarding the decisions that were taken at either conference. Commentators in the United States take the view that the meetings have a direct bearing upon the problem of a second front in Europe, and that the Anglo-American Allies realise that no invasion of the Continent will be practicable until the supply lines across the Western Ocean have been safeguarded against attack by German submarines. It seems certain that in the future every Allied vessel not actually engaged in combat duty will be used to fight the U-boat threat, and that there will be the closest possible liaison between the Allied naval and air forces in this campaign. Already there are said to be more than five hundred British warships, mainly destroyers and corvettes, protecting Allied convoys in the North Atlantic and Mediterranean, and fresh reinforcements are being added to this fleet every day. There can be no doubt that the U-boat campaign constitutes one of the most serious threats to the Anglo-American cause. Profiting by their experience during the last war, the German naval experts, since the outbreak of the present struggle, have been concentrating upon the rapid production of ocean-going submarines; and, in spite of the British and American countermeasures, the net number of these U-boats has been increasing. During the last war the unrestricted submarine campaign brought Great Britain close to the verge of starvation. The introduction of the convoy system, and the discovery of certain methods of submarine detection, enabled the British to overcome the danger, and, from the middle of 1917 the graph of submarine sinkings began steadily to show a decline.

In all wars, and in all methods of warfare, attack and defence continue to outstrip each other, with attack invariably a few paces ahead. When the present war began the British merchant service was protected by the convoy system; but the Germans first of all produced submarines with a substantially greater range of action than had been possible during the last war, and then they introduced what is known as the "Wolf-pack" system. Under this system the submarines no longer operate individually; they hunt, as it were, in packs. They have been engaged during the last couple of years in attacks on Allied convoys not only to Great Britain, but also to Northern Russian ports; and, while large numbers of ships have run the gauntlet successfully, there undoubtedly have been serious losses. Luck plays a great part in the submarine campaign. Not a single ship was lost when the British and Americans brought off their surprise invasion of Algiers and Morocco; but British Ministers have admitted many times in the House of Commons that the sinkings of merchant ships in the Atlantic have been dangerously heavy at times. It must be remembered that the Allied war effort in Europe depends very largely upon the maintenance of uninterrupted supplies from the United States. Manifestly, an invasion of the European continent would be out of the question unless such supplies could be ensured. Under the wizard-like control of Mr. Henry Kaiser, the production of merchant shipping in the United States has reached remarkable proportions; and it is certain that the monthly additions to the Allied fleets exceed their losses. Nevertheless, the actual proportion of supplies that reaches Europe from the United States is not sufficiently high to enable the Allies to lay their future plans with confidence; and it is for that reason that the Washington conferences have been held. So far, the British and American defences against the U-boats have been signally successful. The people of Great Britain, at the moment, have far more to eat than they had three and a half years after the outbreak of the last war; and the bulk of their foodstuffs still is being brought to their ports in ships. On the other hand, an intensification of the submarine campaign during the coming season is almost certain, and the measures that have been adopted at Washington constitute a form of insurance against the perils of the months that lie ahead.

St. Patrick's Day

It is a curious thing that, in the land of St. Patrick, there has never grown up a custom of giving St. Patrick's Day presents. Every tradition, however, must have an originator; and, perhaps, it is with this in mind that the Electricity Supply Board has published its billet doux to all consumers of current upon the Saint's day. Again, it may be felt that on this day of all days an appeal to the public spirit of the people cannot meet with failure. At any rate, the notice has been published, and may be seen in the news columns of this newspaper. The Shannon is low, because the early spring has been rainless; the Ardnacrusha Power Station, which depends on the flow of the great river, has reduced its output; and the gap has to be filled up by the Pigeon House Station, running upon precious coal. The present to the people, then, upon the national day is an earnest appeal to reduce still further the consumption of electricity. Those whose habit it is to grumble will find plenty to grumble at in this. They will point out that they have no fuel but turf for their fires, that their gas is curtailed to a few hours a day; they will argue that it is the business of the Shannon power station to supply current for the country's needs, and that their own needs cannot reasonably be reduced. Already, they will say, they are living at austerity level, and the tiny saving they could make in current would have no worth-while effect upon the consumption of the nation as a whole. Yet there will be some who will see the matter in its proper light—who will feel grateful for what they have, rather than cry for what they have not. They know that they live in a land flowing—relatively, at least—with milk and honey. They know that almost four bitter years of unrelenting warfare have left them more happily situated, in regard to supplies, than almost any other European country. They know that in making the small sacrifice asked of them by the E.S.B. they will be making but a tiny gesture of thankfulness for their present well-being upon St. Patrick's Day.

In the Garden

Regardless of what the seeds catalogue and the horticultural manual may advise, the Irish plotholder and suburban gardener sets his exercises by feasts and festivals. It was he, no doubt, who first made a tenet of the fallacy that "on St. Patrick's Day the warm side of the stone turns up," for St. Patrick's Day is one of the most important of the horticultural occasions. Smart fellows who took a gamble with the frosts and sowed beans in November expect the stalks to have a brave and sturdy appearance by the 17th of March; lovers of salad feel it right that their young lettuces should mark a design in green tracery for the feast of the shamrock; and, of course, no other day in the year is more noted for scores of vigorous and enthusiastic potato-planting. The long list of advertisements in the gardening columns shows that the seedsmen know how the amateur spadesmen now are itching for the first of the big spring attacks. There was great digging in Ireland last year. A fear that food might become seriously short made fathers determine that their families should have vegetables in plenty if there was nothing else to eat; but, with all their work, it is doubtful whether many households had stocks of their own when onions were selling in the shops at the same price as oranges or when cauliflowers were tenpence apiece. That circumstance has not disheartened the gardener. Instead, it has caused him to plan upon even more ambitious lines for the winter of 1943, to select more carefully the seeds which he will sow and the manner in which he will sow them, to restrict, perhaps, his rigs of potatoes and beds of cabbage, and to go more deeply into the problem of onions.

RUSSIAN SEE-SAW

By Our Military Correspondent.

IT is of the nature of war that no success is ever quite as complete as its initiator originally hoped for. Contrariwise, no disaster is ever as overpowering as the victim at one time feared. This is because war does not deal exclusively with material and mechanical things. Moral also counts. "It is not the numbers of the slain that loses a battle," said General Dragomirov, "but the demoralisation of the survivors." His countrymen, indeed, have illustrated this truth abundantly.

Moral, however, is difficult to assess—more particularly the moral of an enemy. Just because hostile troops in one's immediate front are falling back hastily—and even in disorder—it does not necessarily follow that all their formations are similarly affected. It seems at least possible that the Russians did not allow sufficiently for this. After their notable—though hard-won—victory at Stalingrad and their series of successes in the eastern Dombass, they seem to have thought it was a question of simply pushing an open door. The further success of Kursk-Bielgorod-Kharkov, not unnaturally, tended to confirm them in this view.

Whatever the reason, the German counterstroke in the Kharkov area caught the Russians on the wrong foot. Just here the Axis armies had a really dense and good railway net—between the lower Dnieper and the Sea of Azov. They were well placed to manipulate great masses—and to do so opposite to where the Russian offensive was dying down. The result was a complete reversal of the situation on this particular sector of the front. The question now is how far northward will the influence of this counter-stroke be felt? If completely successful it might restore the original position up as far as Orel. It will certainly call a halt to any further Russian advances in the region Kursk-Bielgorod until the situation clarifies.

THE SPRING THAW

Nothing that happens between Orel and Leningrad is likely to alter this; certainly nothing short of a complete Russian victory in the Vitebsk-Smolensk-Briansk region will do so. For this there is not now likely to be a sufficient interval of time before the full spring thaw. Meanwhile such terrain as the Germans are yielding here had really only a negative value for them—in that it was withheld from the Russians. Now that the Russians have won it back it will take an appreciable time for them to organise it offensively.

This is why another Axis offensive in South Russia is more than on the cards. How else, indeed, can Russia be thoroughly neutralised? If Russia is left alone she can easily refit: she did so in 1942, although heavily entangled from Voronezh to Vladikavkoz. A different balance of the attacking force might do the trick. It seems to be accepted that the ideal proportion is two divisions of motorised troops to occupy and make good what each one panzer division manages to seize. In their Volga-Caucasus drive of last year the Axis armies do not seem to have had such a proportion. In the present Kharkov operations, however, we hear a good deal about "tanks and motorised infantry."

AXIS MAN-POWER

Much, of course, will turn on the man-power situation as far as operations in Russia are concerned—Axis man-power, that is to say—because the Russians are not likely to fall short in this regard. Unquestionably the man-power question is causing much thought to the High Command just now—witness the sweeping measures of general mobilisation. Probably, however, the anxiety is not so much concerned with the quite immediate future, in other words, enough effectives of good attack quality can be concentrated for another major attack in South Russia in early May or thereabouts. And, of course, if the Volga were cut—perhaps towards Astrakhan this time, instead of at Stalingrad—all would be well. Not that, in such an eventuality, Russia would be knocked out; but her capacity for major offensive operations would be drastically curtailed. It would be quite out of the question for her Anglo-American allies to make good the loss of Caucassian oil, in addition to all the other supplies. The Ural fields are scarcely as yet capable of providing equivalent quantities. Incidentally, the Russians appear to have been passing some "gift horse in the mouth" criticism about Allied war material. But, surely, neither American nor British tanks were primarily designed in view of winter fighting in Russia!

Another point about the Russian fighting seems to call for mention. It will be recalled that one of the first moves of the Russians was to follow-up the reoccupation of Don Steppe, south-east of Rostov and elsewhere, with a liberal supply of tractors. There would be considerable danger of this being so much labour in vain should a German fresh offensive meet with even partial success. The value to the Axis of their 1943 free hand in Azov-Crimea should not be underestimated.
